transforming work through Christ-like relationships

A Day Conference for Christians in Nursing, Midwifery and the Allied Health Professions

13th June 2009

Johnson House, 6 Marshalsea Road,
London SE1 1HL

Relationships are a big issue for NHS clinicians today. How we deal with our colleagues and the public is increasingly under scrutiny. At the same time, relationships between the professions have become increasingly strained and complex as roles change and the boundaries between professions blur. Managers, co-workers, patients; how can our relationship with God influence the way we relate to others?

Most people become interested in Jesus through watching Christians living out their faith, before they really hear the message of the gospel. How can the grit of day to day relationships become pearls of great price?

This year's joint conference for Christian in the allied professions nursing and midwifery (rescheduled from February) will focus on how we can live out our faith in Jesus in our day-to-day relationships. The speaker will be Jeremy Hobson. Jeremy is the vicar of St. James' Clerkenwell and formerly a surgeon in the NHS.
